1. What is the State Pension?

The State Pension is a regular payment made by the government after you reach your State Pension age.

On 6 April 2016, the State Pension rules changed to make the system simpler. This guide only covers the new State Pension, for those who reached their State Pension age on or after this date (see page 4).

The full rate for new State Pension in 2024/25 is £221.20 a week. But you may get more or less than this depending on your National Insurance record (see page 6).

The State Pension can be a valuable foundation for your retirement income, so make sure you claim it.

You won't get your State Pension automatically. Visit gov.uk/get-state-pension or call 0800 731 7898 to apply.

“ Making a claim was amazingly easy and straightforward.

If you reached State Pension age before 6 April 2016, you'll claim under the old system.

Read our factsheet Understanding your State Pension for more information.

2. Who can get it?

The new State Pension is for those who reached their State Pension age on or after 6 April 2016.

You'll claim it if you're:

- a woman born on or after 6 April 1953
- a man born on or after 6 April 1951.

If you were born before then, you'll qualify under the old system, even if you've delayed claiming it. See our factsheet Understanding your State Pension for more information.

You can start your State Pension claim up to three months before you reach your State Pension age if you apply online, or four months if you apply by phone. If you qualify, you'll start getting your State Pension once you reach this age.

What's my State Pension age?

The State Pension age is now the same for people of all genders. It's currently 66 and is gradually increasing. Your State Pension age could be higher or lower than this, because it depends on your birthday.

To do

Check your State Pension age on gov.uk/state-pension-age or by calling the Future Pension Centre on 0800 731 0175.

3. How much could I get?

The full rate for new State Pension is £221.20 a week for 2024/25.

But how much you'll get depends on how many qualifying years are in your National Insurance (NI) record. If you have:

- 35 qualifying years or more – you'll usually get the full rate. You may get more, or less in some circumstances
- 10–35 qualifying years – you'll get part of the full rate for each qualifying year you have. For example, if you have 20 qualifying years, you'd get 20/35ths of the full rate. So $£221.20 \div 35 \times 20 = £126.40$ a week for 2024/25
- fewer than 10 qualifying years – you usually won't get any State Pension, apart from a few exceptions.

A new State Pension claim is usually based on your own NI record, rather than your partner's (see page 12).

To do

To get your free State Pension forecast, call 0800 731 0175 or visit gov.uk/check-state-pension.

Your NI record

You build up your NI record by:

- paying NI contributions while employed or self-employed
- receiving NI credits – for example, if you're claiming benefits while unemployed or caring for someone
- making voluntary NI contributions.

What counts as a qualifying year?

From these contributions or credits, you'll get a qualifying year if you:

- earned at least £6,396 a year (2024/25 rate) from one job if you were employed
- paid NI contributions if you earned at least £6,725 a year (2024/25 rate) or voluntarily if you were self-employed
- were awarded enough NI credits
- paid enough voluntary NI contributions.

Your qualifying years don't need to be all in a row to count towards your State Pension. You just need at least 10 in total to get some money, and at least 35 to get the full amount.

To do

To check your NI record, visit gov.uk/check-national-insurance-record or call the NI enquiry line on 0300 200 3500 to get your NI statement.

What if my State Pension is too low?

If your amount is lower than you expected, you may be able to add to your NI record until you reach 35 qualifying years or your State Pension age.

For example, you may be able to make voluntary NI contributions to increase your State Pension amount. There are pros and cons to this, and you'll need to check if you qualify first.

Read our factsheet Understanding your State Pension to find out more.

In very few circumstances, you may be able to boost your claim based on your partner's NI record (see page 12).

You may be able to claim Pension Credit to top up your retirement income if it's below a certain amount.

Read our guide Pension Credit to find out more.

4. How to claim

You won't get your State Pension automatically, so make sure you claim it.

You can claim it by:

- applying online at gov.uk/get-state-pension
- calling the State Pension claim line on 0800 731 7898
- contacting the International Pension Centre on +44 (0)191 218 7777 if you've retired abroad.

You should get a letter at least two months before you reach your State Pension age that will tell you what to do. If you don't receive this letter, call the claim line (0800 731 7898).

If you qualify for some State Pension and make a claim, you'll usually be paid every four weeks. The money is paid into your bank or building society account.

If you've moved abroad, it can be paid into a bank account in the country you're living in instead.

Good to know

If you can't afford to wait for your first payment, you can apply for a short-term benefit advance by calling 0800 731 0469.

Read our factsheet Extra help with essential costs if you're on a low income for more information.

Can I delay (defer) my State Pension?

Yes, you can. To delay your State Pension you don't need to do anything – just don't claim it.

When you do start claiming, your payment will be boosted by around 5.8% for each year you delay. You can't take this money as a lump sum.

If you're thinking about delaying, it's a good idea to get independent financial advice. You can search for an independent financial adviser at:

- Unbiased (0800 023 6868, unbiased.co.uk)
- Society of Later Life Advisers (0333 2020 454, societyoflaterlifeadvisers.co.uk)
- MoneyHelper (0800 011 3797, moneyhelper.org.uk/retirement-adviser-directory).

5. FAQs

Can I get my State Pension if I'm still working?

Yes, you can claim it and keep working past your State Pension age. Pensions can be taxed, so you may pay more income tax depending on your income. You'll stop paying National Insurance (NI) contributions after reaching State Pension age.

Can I claim on my spouse or partner's NI record?

The new State Pension is based on your own NI record. Most people cannot claim on their spouse or civil partner's NI record. But you may be able to inherit or increase your payment based on their record if you're:

- widowed, divorced or your civil partnership has been dissolved
- a woman who paid reduced-rate NI contributions (known as Married Woman's Stamp)
- claiming under the new system but your partner claimed under the old system.

The rules are complex so it's best to check if you think you qualify. Call the Future Pension Centre on 0800 731 0175 or visit gov.uk/state-pension-through-partner.

What happens if I retire early?

You'll still have to wait until you reach State Pension age to get your State Pension.

Depending on your situation, you may qualify for other benefits like Universal Credit. Call our Helpline on 0800 319 6789 to arrange a benefits check.

Will I lose out under the new system?

You shouldn't lose out. Your State Pension calculation takes into account NI contributions under the old system, so you get the highest amount possible. But this means some people can get more or less than the full rate.

For more information on both State Pension systems, read our factsheet Understanding your State Pension.

Everyone's situation is different. If you'd like advice, you can call our Helpline on 0800 319 6789 to arrange to speak to an adviser.
